Churchbourne Named NRA Foundation Executive Director
August 1, 2025 by John Richardson

Peter Churchbourne has been named as the Executive Director of the NRA Foundation. Prior to this, he served as the Managing Director of the NRA's Hunting, Conservation, and Ranges Division as well as heading the Hunters' Leadership Forum. He had previously served with Ducks Unlimited for a number of years.

From the press release announcing his appointment by the NRA Foundation:

"We're excited to welcome Peter Churchbourne to the team," said Tom King, NRA Foundation President. "His proven track record of relationship building, fiscal responsibility, fundraising and an innovative mindset will be instrumental as we continue to grow the Foundation while providing funding, education and leadership within the Second Amendment community."

In his new role, Churchbourne will oversee all the NRA Foundation operations, helping to increase awareness, expand outreach, and grow opportunities within the Second Amendment community. This appointment reflects the NRA Foundation's commitment to sound governance, transparency, accountability, and ethical leadership. We remain dedicated to strengthening our trust with our stakeholders and upholding the principles that will determine our long-term success.
